BEFORE THE PHOTO "Growing up, Johnny Cash was always playing around the house, so he had a huge influence on my writing process by the time I finally had the cognitive understanding of what it meant to tell a story through song," shares Brooklyn. "Music was always something I tried to be involved in. I did Madrigals choir at my school — it was kind of like Glee. I also dabbled in theater and music theory; all the fun stuff."

ON THE HORIZON She has an EP coming out in September.

WHO IS BROOKLYNN She's a witchy woman who carries a toy skull around in her bag, citing funk and gospel as some sources of inspiration. She listens to Janis Joplin and Shakira, and loves the radio. It's clear she grew up in a creative household; she talks fast and takes everything in with an infectious eagerness. "My Mom was weird with mine and my sister's names. She named us after cities and spelled them differently, but it works. Her name is Cydnee," she shares.

PLAYLIST WORTHY Like her idol, Shakira, Brooklyn makes music in other languages. "I want to sing my music in Spanish so as not to limit myself to one audience."
